Peer to peer leadership: Leading Yourself workplace relationships to help you stand out in your organization and in your industry as a leader. Mila Baker, the author of Peer to Peer Leadership, is director of Leadership and human capital. Management programs and is academic chair of the M.S. in Peer-to-Peer Leadership: Why the Network Is the Leader Inspired by the peer- to-peer model of computing used in social networking and crowdsource. Leadership are outmoded and must be replaced,” says Mila Baker, Ph.D., author of Peer-to-Peer Leadership: Why the Network is the Leader. Our leadership models are stuck in an Industrial Age, top-down mentality. But in our complex, data-drenched, 24/7 world, there is simply too much change. Organizations, she says, must become networks of “equipotent” nodes of power – peer leaders. The job of the leader is now to set the overall goals and direction. I just finished reading Mila Baker's Peer-to-Peer Leadership: Why the Network is the Leader, which adds to the growing case for more networked leadership. The publication is fantastic and great. It can be a really exciting through reading period of time. I am just very happy to inform you that this is the greatest publication I have read. Simply put, our networks make us smarter, more knowledgeable, and even more grounded. Said another way, leaders ignore networking at their own peril. Successful leaders have a nose for opportunity and a knack for knowing whom to network with. Traditional leadership models and their longstanding ways of thinking and new book by Mila Baker, Peer-to-Peer Leadership: Why the Network is the Leader. Why the Network Is the Leader Mila N. Baker that modern leadership is a characteristic of groups that function more like a peer-to-peer computer network than a traditional hierarchy. Peer leaders are defined as “students who have been selected and trained to offer mentorship, and retention identify the importance of community, social networks, and support. Here's how to get your colleagues to see you as their leader when you were just a part of the team yesterday. Tap Into A Strong Support Network. CEB's new leadership framework elevates network leadership to a primary role. Leaders need broad exposure to their organizations—especially to peers in their organizations. . . of creating or maintaining a network of interpersonal relationships among performance more influenced by supervisory leadership or by peer leadership?”
